

ETHNOGRAPHIC RESEARCH COLLOQUIUM

Beyond Scarcity and Surplus: Labor and Oil in the Arabian Sea

Every year, more than one million Indians travel annually to work in the Gulf, one of the few international destinations where men without formal education can find lucrative employment. In this talk, Andrea Wright will discuss this labor migration and her research, which follows Indian migrants from their villages to oil projects in the United Arab Emirates. Looking at labor migration as a social process, this talk will demonstrate the role migrant plays in shaping global capitalism.

Thursday, February 24th, 2022

12:15 pm

107 Oechsle Center for Global Education

Light lunch will be provided.

Sponsored by the Department of Anthropology & Sociology's Ethnographic Research Fund